1. Mission. The 694th Mission Support Squadron (694 MSS) is an operational component of the 694th Intelligence Group (694 IG), influencing decisive information operations that shape the battlespace environment. The squadron is specialized and consists of teams of intelligence professionals supporting global reach, focusing global power, and securing and maintaining information superiority by ensuring air base operations support is conducted. This includes command, legal, administrative, logistical, resource, and recreational support for Air Force elements, active duty, and reserve assigned to Fort George G. Meade, geographically separated units and joint service personnel assigned to the National Security Agency (NSA).

2. Command. The Commander (694 MSS/CC):

2.1. Is subordinate to the Commander (694 IG/CC).

2.2. Oversees the administrative support of the assigned squadrons and group personnel.

3. Responsibilities. The 694 MSS/CC:

3.1. Exercises command and control of the 694 IG personnel dispersed throughout the squadron.

3.2. Provides base support operations to 694 IG personnel.

3.3. Provides military personnel flight support to 694 IG personnel, other Air Force personnel also located at Ft Meade, and retirees in the Baltimore-Washington area.

3.4. Provides morale, welfare, and logistical support to 694 IG personnel.

- 3.5. Executes duties as necessary or as directed from higher headquarters.
- 3.6. Provides communications and information management support to 694 IG personnel.
- 3.7. Provides security police support to ensure proper processing of security clearance and monitoring of SCI (sensitive compartmented information) background checks.
